DAILY JOCO NEWS

TRUE FACTS ABOUT RADIOS

In the “good ‘ol days” of steam sailing, a ship’s radio operator was known as a Marconist (as in, “Guglielmo Marconi,” inventor of the wireless telegraph). A miscommunication with a Marconist may have been partially responsible for the mysterious loss of Amelia Earhart’s ill-fated flight.

Mr. Marconi (d. 1937) could not be reached for comment.

NAUTICAL LINGO

Show everyone that you’re a hoopy frood who knows where their towel is by memorizing this nautical lingo:

“Seathrall” – The ineffable joy of snorting ocean water accidentally

“Don’t salt the grog” – pick up one’s litter

“Three Sheets to the Wind” – Hanging one’s linens on the verandah to dry.

“Kicking the lime” – tripping on citrus during a foul wind, as in the venerable sea chanty “The Rocky Shoals o’ Chantilly”

“co-axswain” – Onboard cable guy

“bo-atswain” – Onboard vaguely Eastern-European off-color documentarian

“Hoisting the Mame sail” – Watching reruns of Murder, She Wrote in the crew mess on a discarded piece of canvas or burlap.

“Jo Cove” – a hive of scum and villainy

“Brigadeck” – Level of the ship immediately below the Main Deck that can only be accessed one out of every hundred days.

“Gunwhale” – A vengeful cetacean, possibly in the employ of the notorious Billy (the Squid).

HALF MOON CAY, BAHAMAS

Ahoy! We’ve arrived at our first Port of Call, Holland America’s idyllic beach island, Half Moon Cay (pronounced ½ 🌙 🏖️).

A significant improvement from its previous iteration, “New Moon Cay”, this low-slung Bahamian Island has been called “the Caribbean Riviera”. By us. Just now.

But don’t take our word for it! Half Moon Cay features long sandy beaches, long, well-stocked buffets, and Long John Silver’s... treasure. So go ashore (or don’t), and make some new memories of your own (or don’t—you can dwell on the past too! It’s Retro Day: did we mention that?) At any rate, make sure you’re back in time for our evening events. We have lots of adventures planned, and they all involve you—no pressure though!

SOLO: A JOCO CRUISE STORY

Drew (the “D” of JPSD) and Cruise Mom Thera will host a meet-up for solo travelers today at 3:30pm at the Lido Bar. Come as you are – even if you are low-down, stuck-up, half-witted, scruffy-looking nerf-herder.

In fact, if you are that, please especially show up. We would love to meet a nerf-herder.
